EDINBURGH:

PRINTED FOR THE SCOTTISH BURGH RECORDS SOCIETY

MDCCCLXXI.

Colston & Son, Printers,
Edinburgh.

THE SCOTTISH BURGH RECORDS SOCIETY.

The value of the early Records of the Burghs of Scotland, as throwing light upon national life and manners, explaining national institutions, and illustrating social progress, has been fully recognised, and can scarcely be exaggerated. Some of the Book Clubs, which have contributed so much to the elucidation of Scottish History, have already directed their attention to these Records. The Spalding Club has given the country a peculiarly interesting and valuable series of extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, while the Maitland Club has published notices from the Records of Dysart, and extracts from the Burgh Records of Glasgow, Prestwick, Edinburgh, and Canongate. Apart, however, from what has been done in regard to Aberdeen, it cannot be said that much more has been effected than merely to break ground in the direction of investigating and publishing extracts from the Burgh Records of Scotland; and as nothing more is now to be hoped from the Book Clubs which still exist, this Society has been formed for the special purpose of undertaking the work.

Besides extracts from the Burgh Records, copies of the Charters of Burghs and illustrative Extracts from contemporary local Records will be given, as far as may be considered desirable.

The annual subscription is One Guinea, payable in advance, on the 1st day January. The first subscription was payable on 1st January 1868.

The Extracts from the Records of each Burgh will, as far as the Committee [redacted] expedient, be issued separately, and without adhering to any prescribed [redacted]

As affording a key to much that is to be found in the Records of the Burghs, and as generally illustrative of municipal institutions in Scotland, the Committee resolved to publish, in early volumes of the series, the Laws of Scotland relating to the Burghs, down to the accession of James VI. to the crown of England, and probably to the union of the two kingdoms. In pursuance of this design, they have already issued a volume containing the Laws of the Four Burghs, and the old Laws relating to the Burghs, from the earliest period of record till the return of James I. to Scotland in 1424. The editing of that work, and the preparation of the introductory historical sketch of the Burghs prefaced to it, were undertaken by Professor Cosmo Innes, who has also undertaken the editing of the second volume, which is now passing through the press.

A volume of Extracts from the oldest Records of the City of Edinburgh, extending from 1403 till 1528, and including all that is now known to exist of the burghal legislation of the capital during that period, was delivered to the members during March 1870. A second volume, containing Extracts from these Records, and Selections from the Accounts of the Treasurers and Deans of Guild of the City, down to 1556–7, is now ready for issue. A third volume, containing selections from the Records and Accounts of the City till after the Reformation, with a general index of matters in the three volumes, is in preparation.

The Corporation of Edinburgh having authorised the transcription and printing, for its own purposes, of its oldest Charters and other muniments, was pleased to allow the Scottish Burgh Records Society to print off copies for the use of the members of the Society. That volume, containing Charters from 1143 to 1540, was delivered to the members in January last. The preparation of a second volume has been authorised.

The editing of "Selections from the Burgh Records of Aberdeen" having been undertaken by JOHN STUART, Esq., LL.D., in continuation of the series prepared by him for the Spalding Club, a volume of Extracts from these Records, extending from 1625 till 1642, was delivered to the members some weeks ago. It is expected that Dr Stuart will be able to overtake a second volume of this interesting series during the ensuing year.

A selection of Charters relating to the Burgh of Peebles, and illustrative of its history, with Extracts from the oldest Records of the Burgh, is passing through the press. William Chambers, Esq., of Glenormiston, author of the "History of Peeblesshire," has kindly undertaken to write a historical preface to this collection.

Selections from the Records of the Burghs of Haddington, Dunfermline, and Dysart, are being prepared.

Some progress has been made in preparing for publication a [redacted] of the oldest Charters of the Burghs of Scotland, and the Committee will be glad to receive from Town Clerks and other custodiers of public documents, such information as they can give in regard to original documents in their possession, illustrative of the constitution and early history of the municipal institutions of the country.

It is requested that all who are disposed to further the prosecution of this project, will be so good as to intimate their subscriptions as early as possible to the Secretary or Treasurer.

PREFACE.

PREFACE.

A FORMER Volume of "Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Edinburgh" contains all that is known to exist of what may be termed the Burghal Legislation of the Scottish capital previous to May 1528. The present volume comprises the sequel of that legislation till the commencement of the regular series of the Council Records in 1551. The two volumes thus contain all the acts and ordinances of the civic authorities, so far as preserved, prior to the commencement of the second half of the sixteenth century; and these are now given in chronological order. This second volume also contains extracts from the subsequent Records of the Burgh, and selections from the Accounts of the Treasurers and Deans of Guild of the City, so far as these are still in existence, down to 1556-57.

The continuous records of the Council, which commence in 1551, set forth details of municipal administration of great local interest and value, but too voluminous to be given in full with a due regard to the objects of the present publication. A wide discretion, in selecting and curtailing the materials since that date, has therefore been exercised; but when doubt existed as to the propriety of giving a passage, it has usually been inserted. Other sources of information as to the internal history of the City previous to the Reformation being so meagre, those interested in the subject are not likely to find fault with what may even be considered unnecessary fulness of detail.

The materials for the present volume have been mainly gathered from the several sources described in the preface to the first volume, with the following additions:—

(1.) A volume titled on the back, "Court of the Dean of Guild," "Burgh Court, 1529-1531." The first part of the volume consists of minutes of the Dean of Guild Court, from 29th April 1529 till 19th June 1557, but these are of little general value or interest, and it has not been considered expedient to put these in the present collection. The second part is intituled, "Liber Statutorum Burgi de Edinburgh, de mandato Magistri Ade Ottirburne prepositi ballivorum et counsulum eiusdum," and contains a series of acts relating to the police of the burgh, extending from 8th October 1529 till 19th October 1531. The whole of the series is included in this collection.

(2.) A volume titled on the back, "Accounts of Bailies and Town Treasurers from 1552 to 1567;" and,

(3.) A volume titled, "Dean of Guild's Accounts from 1552 to 1567.

The first of these volumes of Accounts consists of two parts separately paged. In the first part are recorded the intromissions of the Bailies of Edinburgh with extents or taxations imposed on the inhabitants, for various national and local purposes, between the years 1540 and 1566 : and the second part contains the accounts of the intromissions of the Town Treasurers with the common good or proper revenues of the Burgh, for the ten years from Martinmas 1552 to Martinmas 1562; two accounts of David Symer, master of work, for taking down the old Tolbooth and building the new Tolbooth, 1561-64 ; and the Town Treasurers' accounts from Martinmas 1563 to 22d February 1566-67. The second volume contains the accounts of the Deans of Guild, from Michaelmas 1552 to Michaelmas 1567, with the exception of the years 1558-59, and the period from Michaelmas 1559 to May 1560.

The accounts both of the Treasurer and Dean of Guild for the years 1552-53 are printed nearly at length; and copious extracts are given from the accounts for the years 1553-54, 1554-55, and 1555-56, —unnecessary repetitions or details alone being excluded. The style and structure of the originals are thus exhibited, while every material fact illustrative of social and civic life in Edinburgh three centuries ago is faithfully given.

The work of transcribing these accounts, and of carefully collating the proof sheets with the originals, was readily undertaken by Mr Robert Adam, City Accountant, whose intimate acquaintance with the numerous and varied accounts in the archives of the City pre-eminently fitted him for such a work. To Mr Adam, therefore, the Editor offers his best acknowledgment for a willing co-operation which has largely added to the interest and value of the present volume.

The two volumes of Extracts now published bring down the selections from the records of the Burgh to within four years of the date at which the doctrines of the Reformation were formally recognised and established by Parliament. These four years were momentous years for Scotland; and it would be interesting to see from the contemporary records of the Burgh in which many of the most important events connected with the Reformation took place, how far the changes then in progress are reflected in the municipal administration. Doubtless, many of the Magistrates and Councillors of the day were active promoters of that movement which more than any other has influenced the subsequent history of the country, and moulded the character of its people. The action of these men during such a crisis, even in the conduct of ordinary public business, is not without interest. Still more interesting must it be to discover from authentic records,—the very phraseology of which photographs as it were the incidents they narrate,—how the fabric of the old religious institutions succumbed to the innovating vigour of the new doctrines. The Council records and accounts of the Burgh contain many curious details illustrative of this portion of national history, and selections from them are being made with a view to early publication in a third volume.

Since the completion of the first volume of Extracts from the Records of the Burgh of Edinburgh, there has been issued a volume containing charters and documents relating to the City, from 1143 till 1540; and the Corporation has authorised the preparation of a second volume, which will probably contain its charters and muniments previous to the date at which King James VI. succeeded to the English crown. These two volumes of charters, and the three volumes of Extracts from the Records, when completed, will nearly exhaust, for historical purposes, the materials in the archives of the City during the period over which those volumes may extend. It has therefore been considered expedient to postpone the historical preface to the present collection, and to make it applicable to all the volumes published and projected with reference to Edinburgh.

A table of contents, stating the source from which every extract in the present volume is taken, is prefixed.

Chronological lists of the Lord Provosts, Magistrates, and Officers of the Burgh; of the Constables and Governors of the Castle; of the Sheriffs of the County of Edinburgh; of the Parliaments and General Councils of Scotland; of the Provincial Councils of the Scottish Clergy; and of the Conventions of the Royal Burghs of Scotland, held at Edinburgh,—in continuation of those given in the previous volume,—will be appended to the next volume of Extracts from the Records of the Burgh. A glossary and general index applicable to the three volumes will also accompany that volume.

of the said Catherine. By gift, dated 3d September 1536, the King granted Alison's escheat to David Wood. The provost of Edinburgh remonstrated against this gift, however, and claimed the escheat in virtue of the town's right by royal charter; but the King, by an order dated 6th September 1536, refused to recognise the claim, and required his gift to be given effect to,—consenting that, for the time to come, the judgment of the Lords of Council should be taken on the claim, and that for that purpose the rights and evidents of the town should be submitted to the said Lords. A memorandum in the archives of the city bears that the escheat, in this case, passed from the town, in consequence of the King's request, and the fact that Alison and Catherine were put to the horn not by reason of their being justified, but by reason of their being fugitive from the law. Pro Roberto Maluile, Laurentio de Ovile, Augustino Polliciar ac eorum collegis.

[On the fifth day of the month of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand five hundred and forty-eight, the sixth indiction, the fourteenth year of the pontificate of our lord Pope Paul the Third: In presence of me notary public and witnesses, underwritten personally appeared honest men, Laurence of Ovile, and Augustine Polleciar, French merchants in the train of the French army against the English now in Scotland, and set furth and certified in French to me notary public subscribing of the Scotch nation understanding the French tongue, to the following effect, that on the second day of this present August, between nine and ten hours before noon, there arose disputes and opprobrious words within the house of an honest man, Robert Mailvile, burgess of the burgh of Edinburgh, in Scotland, between the deceased John of Schane, a Frenchman, born in the city of Lyons on the river Rhone in France, and John of Cargyllyng, also a Frenchman, born in the city called Schevyng, lying in Britanny within France and the bishoprick of St Paul, the said Cargyllyng having asked from the said Schane, ten shillings of French money which he owed him, as he alleged, to which the said Schane answered that he owed him nothing: By reason of which words had between them on both sides, Cargyllyng seizing a candlestick on the table of the said Robert, threw it at the said John of Schane, but by chance it struck Robert, which being seen both Schane and Robert struck one another, the candle being then extinguished, and Schane drawing his unsheathed dagger went out of the house of the said Robert and immediately returned to the said chamber, holding in his hand what is called "ane jedwart staff" and in French "ane jifflyng," shouting in French who "is he who dare follow me?" Which words the said Schane hearing, he drew his sword and dagger and rushed on the said Cargyllyng with the intention as appeared to the bystanders of wounding him: While these things were done a certain John Barron, a French merchant, lest Schane and Cargyllyng should wound themselves, threw himself between them. In the meantime the foresaid Schane, fearing to be wounded by the said Cargyllyng, struck the said John Barron with his sword, by which he mortally wounded him, whereupon he expired; moreover the said Laurence of Ovile, and Augustine Polleciar certified the said Robert Malvile Scotchman, their host for the time, to be innocent and not guilty of the said homicide, and that he used all his care and diligence to prevent the same; and the said Barron about the eleventh hour at the dead of night, before he expired, being of sound mind, freely declared the said Robert to be innocent of his death and wound; as likewise John Schavage, captain of a certain ship of the French king, as he alleged, John of Poschye, merchant, and Duncan Hog attested the said Robert to be innocent as aforesaid; and as the said deceased had declared as aforesaid at the said hour, declared and attested also Laurence of Ovile and Augustine Polliciar likewise innocent of his death; and the said John of Schane to have inflicted on him the mortal wound, and not the said Cargyllynge. Whereupon the said Laurence, Augustine, John of Cargyllynge, and John of Mywn, in name and behalf of the said John Schane, asked respectively a note. Done in the house of the said Robert situated within the burgh of Edinburgh, about the first hour afternoon in the foresaid year. Witnesses, Sir David Lawson, chaplain, a Scotchman understanding the French tongue, John Schavage, John Mason, merchant of Orleans, Martin Barra, Sebastian Mynnett, John Poschye, and Duncan Hoge, Frenchmen.]

[1] These proposals are contained in a document in the archives of the city. It bears no date, but was evidently addressed to the Magistrates and Council during the minority of Queen Mary,—probably between the 22d of December 1542, when the Earl of Arran was installed as Governor of Scotland, and the 12th of April 1554, when the Queen Dowager, Mary of Guise, was appointed Regent on the abdication of the Earl.

It is scarcely to be supposed that such proposals would have been made while the country was distracted by contests for the regency, and the ravages of the English invaders, which extended from the death of King James V. till the conclusion of peace with England in April 1550. They are more likely to have been submitted after the conclusion of the peace, when attention was being directed to the "administration of justice, the improvement of the moral character of the people, and the recovery of the country from the ravages committed by the war."—[Tytler's History of Scotland, Vol. IV., p. 429.]

The reference by the author of the proposals to the "pley of Middleburgh," and to the "doungetting of the customs in France," seems to point to his connection with these matters, and if so, helps to fix the date of the document as in the early part of Queen Mary's reign. On 2d April 1541, the Commissioners of the Burghs, at a Convention held in Edinburgh, resolved to "pass to the port and toun in Flandaris of the Dukis landis that will gyf and grant to thame maist and greitast priuelegis, and gif it war the Kingis grace plesour, erar to Myddilburgh nor Campheir, sua that the toun of Campheir grantit nocht nor gaif thame larger priuelegis nor Myddilburgh." They also resolved to pay the expenses of any embassy that the King might send to France, "for the doungetting of the xij d. and new imposition maid in France thairof upon ilk frank." [Antea, p. 105.] This resolution appears to have been confirmed by the commissioners of Burghs on the 6th of the same month. [Yair's account of the Scotch Trade in the Netherlands, 1776, p. 105.] And in the same year, Andrew Mowbray and James Henderson, as commissioners "from the town of Edinburgh in Scotland, for the advancement of the staple and the benefit of the nation of Scotland," appear to have reported in favour of Middleburgh as the staple port. [Ibid, pp. 107-110.] On 30th April 1541, the town council of Edinburgh ordained all ships "frauchtit be the gude toun to Flandaris at this vayage to pas to the port of Middilburgh," and on the same day obliged one Leonard Cornelius to take his ship to that port, "under the pane of ane hundreth pundis greit to be payit to James Henrisoun in the townes name, to be furth cummand to thair commoun gude." [Antea, pp. 105, 106.] On 19th May 1541, a contract was entered into between the town of Middleburgh and Andrew Mowbray and James Hendrysoun, "commissioners or deputies from the city of Edinburgh, and other burghs of the kingdom Scotland," by which the town of Middleburgh agreed to give the Scotch merchants certain privileges in consideration of the staple being held there. [See Contract in the Archives of the City. Abstract or Inventory of City Charters, Vol. I., p. 403. Printed Records of the Convention of Royal Burghs, Vol. I., pp. 551-554.] On 14th July 1541, the town council of Edinburgh engaged to pay the king £2000 Scots, lent by him for the whole burghs, and delivered to the Lord Cardinal, "for expeditioun and doungetting of the custome, and new impositioun of xij d. throw all the pairttis of France, new taikin fra the merchanttis of this realme of ilk frank waryt." [Antea, p. 108.] On 23d August 1541, James Henrisoun appeared before the town council of Edinburgh, "as ane of the commissaris direct fra the toun of Myddilburgh in thair names." [Ibid.] In the accounts of Robert Graham, treasurer of the city of Edinburgh for 1553–4, the following entry occurs:—"Item, payit for the signet of the Quenis letteris, and drink-silver thairof, discharging paking of hirring in the Brinteland, and to James Hendersoun to pas thairto, quha remanit dyveris dayis thair, xxvj s. viij d." [Printed Records of Convention, Vol. II., p. 542.]

These entries show James Henderson to have been concerned in the fixing of the staple port at Middleburgh in 1541, and to have been engaged in the affairs of the Burghs in 1553. They also show that in 1541, efforts were made to have the duty exacted from Scotch merchants in France reduced. It may therefore be reasonably assumed that the same person was the author of the proposals in the document printed in the text, and that those proposals are the articles and ordinances which were submitted to the town council on 7th October 1552, and are referred to in the act of that date.

Item, becaus our Souerane Lordis liegis, inhabitantis the burgh of Edinburgh and vtheris reparand thairto, ar gretlie oppressit and iniurit be the malt- Act of Parliament. For maltmakers.

1 The date of the above Act cannot be assigned to this period. Patrick, the third Earl of Bothwell, succeeded his father (who fell at Flodden) in 1513, and lived till September 1556, but there is no evidence of his ever having been Provost of Edinburgh. During the period between 1530 and 1538, he was in disgrace, and was regarded with well-founded suspicion. In 1529, he was imprisoned for protecting marauders on the borders, and remained six months in confinement. In 1531, he entered into treasonable correspondence with the Earl of Northumberland, and on his return to Scotland was imprisoned in the castle of Edinburgh, where he still was in June 1533. In 1538, he was banished the kingdom, and is said to have resided in Venice till after the death of James V., which took place in 1542.

The Patrick Earl of Bothwell referred to in this act, was probably Patrick Lord Hailes, created Earl of Bothwell by James IV. in October 1486. This nobleman stood high in the favour of his sovereign, to whom he was Master of the Household, and who appointed him Lord High Admiral of Scotland for life. He also held the office of keeper of the castle of Edinburgh, with three hundred merks of the customs of the burgh, and was Sheriff of the county of Edinburgh and constabulary of Haddington. He appears to have been Provost of Edinburgh in 1487. In all probability, therefore, the above act should be assigned to the year 1487–8.

Act of Parliament. For maltmakers.

GUTHRE.

[The "mair sowme restand awin" to James Carmichael appears to refer to the balance of 101 lib. 15s. 8d. due to him on his account for the year 1552-53, for which he did not take credit in his subsequent accounts. There was a balance of 21 lib. 1s. ½d. due by him on his account for 1554-55, with which he charged himself, along with the "Pece silver," in his account for 1556-57; and in 1557-58 he charged himself with the balance of 35 lib. 16s. 1½d., due by James Barron on the account for 1555-56, which, the above report bears, "wes ordanet to be deliverit and payit" to him. It was not until February 1561 (see page 343) that James Carmichael got a settlement of the balance on his account for the year 1552-53.]
